If we define the average price of a vote as  $m = \sum_i m_i / \sum_i v_i$  and suppose that it is roughly uniform across candidates, it is easy to see that  $c = 1/m$ . Here,  $v_i$  is the number of votes of candidates  $i$ . If the relation between votes and money is linear, then the plot of  $v \times (c - m/m)$  should be a constant function of  $m$  with value close to 1.0.

The price of a vote: Diseconomy in proportional elections

The Price of a Vote in the Middle East examines this key - and often overlooked - component of clientelism. The author draws on elite interviews and original survey data collected during his years of field research in Lebanon and Yemen; two Arab countries in which political constituencies follow sectarian, regional, and tribal divisions.
